ONE AT A TIME.

By Hal E. Roach. /

A would-be champ whose egotism far exceeds that of his prowess is making a tour of small towns and in local theatres advertises that he will meet all comers for a stipulated sum. But, like all swell headed gentlemen, he meets more than his match in a small one-horse burg and the punishment in conjunction that his manager had handed out to others is served upon himself with the result that he gets the beating of his life. The moral lesson derived from this film is obvious and the fun of watching it is pleasingly entertaining.
